

Program Description: Campus Archaeology is part of the Department of Anthropology, and works in conjunction with a variety of resources at MSU to protect and preserve the archaeological resources that are present on our campus. Campus Archaeology works with the goals of preserving the archaeological record, contributing to the understanding of archaeology and MSU's material past, and to furthering the education of undergraduate and graduate students through hands-on, experiential learning. Campus Archaeology currently consists of Dr. Lynne Goldstein, Professor of Anthropology and Director of Campus Archaeology, and Terry Brock, Campus Archaeologist. For more information, visit our website: <http://campusarch.msu.edu>

Internship Description: The Intern will assist the program through historical research, archaeological excavation, lab analysis, public outreach, and publication and presentation of findings. The Intern will gain experience working in a Cultural Resource Management setting, unique to their educational experience. The Intern will also gain experience in discussing their research through digital social media and blogging. For examples, please visit <http://capintern.wordpress.com>. The internship will provide course credit in the Department of Anthropology. The Intern will be advised by Dr. Lynne Goldstein, and will be expected to present at the Undergraduate Research Symposium.

Requirements: The applicant must be in good-standing at Michigan State University, and must have taken part in an Archaeological Field School. Students majoring in Anthropology are preferred, although others are more than welcome. The position will require between 5-10 hours per week.

Application Procedure: This application must be completed by Friday, April 17th. Applications can be turned in to Terry Brock, either through e-mail at brockter@msu.edu, or by hand to the Department of Anthropology, 3rd floor, Baker Hall. You will be notified regarding interviews shortly after the application deadline.
